Illinois women making history in '94 campaign

By Emily Priddy
Politics Writer

Nine Illinois women are making national history as they launch their campaigns for the top five positions in the upcoming state election.

State Sen. Perany Severns, D-Decatur, a candidate for state treasurer, said she sees nothing unusual about women participating in politics.

"It never occurred to me that I should hesitate to run simply because I'm female," Severns said.

Severns joins Sen. Judy Baar Topinka, R-Chicago, and Democrats Sheila Smith, a businesswoman, and Nancy Drew Sheehan, Cook County Water Reclamation District commissioner, in the treasurer's race.

Kane County Coroner Mary Lou Kearns is seeking the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, and Chicago lawyer Anne Burke, also a Democrat, is running for attorney general in next spring's primary.

Sen. Earlean Collins, D-Chicago, and Department of Employment Security Director Loleta Didrickson, a Republican, are vying for the office left empty by Comptroller Dawn Clark Niesch, who recently announced her candidacy for governor.

Niesch said she encountered sexism early in her political career but quickly won the respect of her colleagues.

A state senator from 1973 to 1991, Niesch served as a delegate to the Illinois Constitutional Convention.

Groups asking for PCB probe

By John Rezanka
Environmental Writer

Members of seven local environmental groups gathered in front of the Carbondale Post Office Tuesday to request a congressional investigation into the incineration of PCBs at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

Rose Rowell, spokeswoman for Southern Coalition for Protecting the Environment, read a prepared statement requesting that congressman Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, call for an investigation into the safety of incinerating PCBs at the refuge.

Rowell said a Greenpeace report about a hazardous waste disposal incinerator in Jacksonville, Ark. that failed to meet acceptable removal standards for dioxins and polychlorinated biphenyls raises questions about the effectiveness and safety of the proposed Crab Orchard incinerator.

The USEPA requires a 99.999 percent removal rate for the incineration of PCBs. Dioxins can be produced by incinerators if complete combustion does not occur.

"A certain amount of hazardous materials are let out legally," Rowell said. "But if something is wrong with the incinerator more is emitted into the atmosphere."

High levels of PCBs and heavy metals were discovered in soil samples from the refuge in the late '70s. The refuge was added to the USEPA's National Priorities List in 1984 and became a Superfund site in 1987.

The USEPA approved incineration as the method for removing PCBs from contaminated soil in September 1991.

Dioxins and PCBs are hazardous materials that pose a health risk to humans and wildlife, Rowell said. The contaminated soils also contain heavy metals such as lead and cadmium that can pose a health threat.

But Irene Deamer, community relations officer for the USEPA,

Labor Day fatalities up this year

Use of seatbelts on rise, authorities say

By Erick Enriquez
Police Writer

While fatalities over Labor Day weekend slightly increased this year as compared to last year, state police say they are confident that more people are buckling up.

Terrence W. Gainer, director of the Illinois State Police, said there were 23 traffic fatalities this past weekend as opposed to 18 in 1992.

Gainer also said troopers, deputies and officers checked a total of 14,073 vehicles and issued 866 tickets and 1,135 written warnings.

There were 50 people ticketed for DUI's and 312 people were issued citations for failure to use a safety belt, he said.

John Tastavic, public information officer for the Illinois State Police, said the Illinois State Police's safety belt blitz has added to public awareness and compliance to safety belt laws.

"Those are just provisional numbers," Tastavic said. "Someone may be in the hospital and in critical condition, but if they died it will be attributed to the Labor Day weekend."

Tastavic said there was a 33-percent increase in enforcement over the Labor Day weekend with the help of federal funds.

"We also engaged in roadside safety, DUI, insurance and valid drivers license checks," Tastavic said. "Motorcycle units were out in full force this weekend."

The 10-day safety-belt blitz, which started Aug. 30 and runs until Sept. 9, is a campaign by the Illinois

Two SIUC students seriously injured in accident

By Christian Kennerly
City Writer

Two SIUC students were seriously injured in a one-car accident Monday on Interstate 57 near Mount Vernon.

Sharon Wilda, a 21-year-old junior pre-major from Belleville, and Darrin Johnson, a 20-year-old sophomore in engineering technology from Hoopeston, were Victims reported to be in stable, fair condition by spokesman about three miles west of Mount Vernon at 4:55 p.m. when the accident occurred, Officer Will Flemming of the Illinois State Police said.

Wilda and Johnson were classified as having major injuries and were taken to Crossroads Hospital in Du Quoin, he said.

A hospital spokesman said

Tuesday that Johnson is listed in stable condition in the intensive care unit.

Wilda has been moved to Memorial Hospital in Belleville, where a hospital spokeswoman said she is in fair condition.

Johnson and Wilda were southbound on Interstate 57 when Johnson, who was driving the pick up truck, fell asleep and lost control of the vehicle, Flemming said.

Flemming said the truck then overturned and both Wilda and Johnson were thrown from the vehicle.

Neither person was wearing a seat belt, and both occupants were issued tickets, he said.

Flemming said reports indicate that alcohol was not a related factor in the accident.

Tabatha Jones, a junior in paralegal studies from Rock Falls, said she was returning to Carbondale from the University of Illinois in Champaign when she saw a woman standing on the road's edge waving her arms.

Sycamores serve SIUC Valley loss

Season-high 24 service errors hurt Salukis in league opener

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Writer

Youth was not served, and the youth did not serve well in the SIUC volleyball team's conference and home opener Tuesday night at Davies Gym.

The youthful Salukis committed a season-high 24 service errors, and lost to Indiana State, 13-15, 15-13, 15-13, 8-15, 15-11.

The loss dropped SIUC to 1-3 on the season and 0-1 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

SIUC head coach Sonya Locke was disappointed with the errors and said they will be the subject of future practices.

"There is going to be a whole lot of practice time on the issue of serving," Locke said. "When you miss serves, you don't even give your team an opportunity to score points, and that is the point that bothers me."

SIUC did not go down without a fight, however, as it pulled off an emotional rally to temporarily postpone the loss.

The Salukis, down two games to one and trailing 8-4 in the fourth, reeled off 11 straight points to capture the game and send the match to a deciding fifth game.

In the rally-point finale, the Sycamores scored four of the last five points to put the match away.

ISU head coach Rhonda Woodward said her team became complacent with the lead in the third game.

"My team kind of was thinking 'we don't have to earn this, we have a four-point lead and we can get the next seven,' so they sat back on their heels," Woodward said. "Once we got into the rally, we basically cleaned the slate and focused on the fifth game."

Missouri Valley Conference volleyball standings

Indiana State (2-2)	1-0
SW Missouri St. (3-0)	0-0
Bradley (4-1)	0-0
N. Iowa (3-1)	0-0
Illinois State (2-2)	0-0
Drake (1-3)	0-0
Tulsa (0-4)	0-0
Wichita State (0-4)	0-0
S. Illinois (1-3)	0-1

ISU rallied in similar fashion in the third game, coming from 13-10 down to take the game, 15-13.

"We were up and down all night, aggressive sometimes, not aggressive others, and you can't play that way against a team like Indiana State," Locke said.

The serving errors offset SIUC's hitting advantage. The Salukis racked up 79 kills to ISU's 61, with five SIUC players garnering double figures.

Heather Herdes and Beth Diehl led the way for SIUC with 16 kills each. Deborah Heyne added 15, while Jodi Revoir and Brandi Stein checked in with 13 and 12 each.

"That is a good balance for us, and I would prefer to have that kind of team," Locke said. "I like the fact that we have that kind of versatility. I like the fact that a lot of our players can score, so we know we can go to anyone."

The Sycamores won the defensive battle with 96 digs to SIUC's 85. Stein was the leader for the Salukis with 24, while Diehl added 15.

The Salukis will remain at home to play host to the Saluki Invitational Friday and Saturday at Davies Gym. Rounding out the four-team tourney are Morehead State, Marquette and Valparaiso.

Quarterback slot still vacant as Dawgs prepare for opener

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

Saluki head football coach Bob Smith did not name a starting quarterback at Tuesday's press conference, but he did say both David Pierson and Matt Jones will play on Saturday.

"If we had to play tonight, Dave Pierson would probably take the snap," Smith said. "That does not mean we've declared him the starter."

"He may just be fractionally ahead as far as picking it up mentally."

Smith said Pierson and Jones have solid arms, the ability to get out of trouble and can execute the offense well.

Smith said the important thing is that the team feels secure with either quarterback on the field.

"I think our team and their teammates have the utmost confidence in them," he said.

Jones, the northern Indiana prep star who attended Nebraska for two years prior to transferring last season, has been impressive in early-season drills.

Pierson, who spent the first two years of his collegiate career at Fullerton Jr. College before switching to SIUC last season, has also been impressive in practice drills.

Smith said he is not too familiar with this week's opponent, the Washburn Ichabods, except for a few basics.

Washburn runs a wing-T offense and a 4-3 defense.

Smith said Washburn's quarterback, Jeremy Smith, can do a little bit of everything.

"He throws it well, he runs the option well and runs the ball himself extremely well," Smith said.

The Saluki running game will feature some new faces, as Melvin Dukes and Takim Brown will take the field.

They join returning runners Greg Brown and William Tolen in the backfield.

Brown, at 240 pounds, gives the Salukis their first bonafide fullback in years.

Smith said Brown came in overweight, but has worked hard at getting in shape.

"He's earned the starting job and will give us our first truly big fullback since we arrived here four years ago," Smith said.

Smith said Calvin Brown and Dave Smith, red-shirted last year, will see some major playing time this year.

Brown will make his presence felt on the defensive line, where Smith said he expects Brown to wreak havoc.

On the other side of the ball, (Dave) Smith will line-up at the tight end spot.

Smith possesses good size at 6-4, 234, and is expected to be a key man in the Saluki scheme.

Brown and Smith said they are repped up for the opener.

"It will be good to hit somebody, else," Smith said.

The injury bug bit the Salukis earlier this week when Bryan Rader, a defensive tackle from Louisville, Kentucky, went down with a knee injury.

Rader will be sidelined for approximately four weeks before returning.

Rader's spot in the line-up will be filled by Mark Matykiewicz, a sophomore who earned a letter last season.

Rugged Salukis slay visiting Panthers, 10-7

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

When Eastern Illinois rugby team came to Carbondale last Saturday, it found a Saluki squad that was ready for war.

The young and inexperienced SIUC team laid it on the line and came away with an opening day victory over the Panthers, 10-7.

Eastera had the size advantage over the Dawgs, but it was the Salukis that were found to be in better condition.

SIUC never ran out of gas despite the hot September sun and their endurance helped seal the victory in the end.

Chad Barclay, a standout player for the SIUC club, said that preseason workouts are what helped the Salukis hold off Eastern.

"It was a big win and we've had a tough practice schedule," Barclay said. "We were in good condition because of all our endurance and skill drills that we do in practice."

Tan Carroll, who plays one of the back positions for the Salukis, said that the team is in such good shape due to the variety of running drills that are a part of their everyday routine.

"At least one day a week we run hills next to the Arena," Carroll said. "We do interval sprints of 20, 50 and 70 yards, along with ball handling drills that require a lot of running."

SIUC drew first blood when Paul Ward scored on an assist from standout packer Frank Smith.

Brian Carl tackled on another score for the Dawgs late in the second half with Carroll getting the assist to polish off the Panthers comeback hopes.

"Frank Smith was all over the field for us," Carroll said. "Our pack was playing real hard because the backs were making them run too much in the first half."

"We talked about it at halftime and got everything straightened out."

U.S. INACTION BOTTLES IN BOSNIA TROUPE — A Sarajevo troupe's adaptation of the 1968 anti-war musical "Hair" has become a symbol of this integrated city's defiance of death and division. But the next show may not go on because of obstacles more formidable than artillery. One U.S. government agency has invited "Hair" to make the tour and 50 members of Congress have backed the project as a powerful vehicle for bringing home the plight of Sarajevo. But the State Department has so far failed to provide the diplomatic muscle needed to get the performers out of this besieged city.

POLITICIANS IN 'CLEAN' ELECTION, AGAIN — Pakistan's politicians are on the election trail for the third time in five years. More than 60 politicians of all hues already have been disqualified from the vote, scheduled for the first week of October, because they turned up on a list of loan defaulters and suspected drug traffickers prepared by the non-political caretaker government. Even the puritan Jamaat Islamic party, which launched the Pakistan Islamic Front (PIF) as a "clean alternative" to its rivals, had its telephones cut for non-payment of bills.

But the worst of the racist literature and other paraphernalia are not even made in the Germany they extol. German investigators trace the bulk of the outlawed material to 40-year-old Gary Rex Lauck, a self-proclaimed mail-order Nazi in Lincoln, Neb., who makes his living churning out nationalistic material in 10 languages, including English, German, Russian and Hungarian.

President Clinton plans to kick off his drive for passage of the trade pact with a speech Tuesday (Sept. 14). At least three congressional committees have scheduled hearings during the week. The trade agreement would phase out all tariffs and other trade barriers between the U.S., Mexico and Canada, creating the world's largest free trade bloc.

In a survey of nearly 15,000 U.S. firms, Manpower found that 22 percent of the businesses surveyed are planning to hire, compared to 21 percent last year. # Wife wins NEA grant shortly after spouse

By Charlotte Rivers
Entertainment Writer

SIUC art instructors Cheonae Kim and Joel Feldman have proved that lightning can strike twice.

Kim has been awarded a $20,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, less than two weeks after her husband, Feldman, was awarded the same amount by the NEA.

Michael Faubion, assistant director of the NEA's Visual Arts Program, said that because of the rigorous competition, the chances of a married couple being selected for two separate grants is almost unbelievable.

"Less than 2.5 percent of those who applied received funding. Judgment is based on the quality of work and there is extremely rigorous competition," Faubion said. "We did not know the two were married. In this case, there were two separate applications in two different categories. It is extraordinary that they were both selected."

Faubion said the panel had no way of knowing Feldman and Kim are married, or that they are from the same school.

"They view things such as the number of years an artist has worked and the exhibition record, but residence is not discussed," he said.

Josh Dare, spokesman for NEA Public Affairs, said he cannot recall an instance of a couple receiving separate grants in the same year, although it has happened when a couple working together applies jointly.

The amount awarded to Kim and Feldman is the NEA's highest funding level, Dare said.

"It is a designation of excellence for them both," he said.

While Feldman was awarded a visual arts fellowship in the works on paper category for his woodcut prints, Kim's grant is in the painting category.

Kim attended SIUC as an undergraduate and graduate student and teaches painting part time at the School of Art and Design. She said she has been painting for about 10 years.

"It is incredible that Joel and I both won," she said.

The NEA left a phone message

Wednesday evening and Kim had to wait 12 hours to return the call, an experience she described as nerve-wracking.

"I am very, very happy for my family and the school," she said.

"I could not wait to write my parents, so I called them in Korea with the news that morning."

Feldman also says he is very happy about his wife's award.

"It is more than one could hope for. We are both stunned and ecstatic," Feldman said.

Robert Paulson, assistant director of the SIUC School of Art and Design, said he is proud of Kim's achievement.

Memorial established in memory of student

University News Service

A memorial service and leadership award at SIUC will honor a May graduate and student leader who died Aug. 31 while undergoing surgery in Chicago.

The Black Affairs Council at SIUC will hold a memorial service for Antonio A. Washington at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 8, in the Student Center Auditorium. And an existing leadership award designated for an African-American student will be renamed the Antonio Washington Memorial Leadership Award.

Washington, son of Camell Washington, of Chicago, received a bachelor's degree in May in construction technology. He had led a number of service groups while a student at SIUC. He served for two years, 1990-

1992, as a coordinator of SIUC's Black Affairs Council, an umbrella organization for nearly 20 black student groups on the campus. The previous year, 1989-1990, he served as president of SIUC's Black Togetherness Organization, a group for university housing residents, and he was active at SIUC in Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity.

The Antonio Washington Memorial Leadership Award will be given annually to an African-American SIUC student who has exhibited leadership potential, said Harriet Wilson Barlow, associate director of SIUC's Student Development. The award will be administered by the SIU foundation.

Memorial contributions designated for the scholarship fund may be made to the SIU Foundation, 1205 Chautauqua, Carbondale, Ill. 62901.

SIU Board of Trustees to finalize Baptist property transfer blunder

By Shawwna Donovan
Administration Writer

The Board of Trustees will finalize a property error Thursday that a local engineering firm found after SIUC purchased the Baptist Student Center from the Illinois Baptist State Association this summer.

An overlooked piece of land caused some confusion and backtracking between SIUC and the association this summer.

SIUC purchased the center from the association July 1, and the remaining land was given to the association. The questioned land was not included in the sale.

The land, all of South Forest Street lying south of Mill Street, had been vacated by the city in its No. 79-45 ordinance.

The University then became sole owner of the property because the city vacated it.

To keep good relations with the association, the University retained ownership of the property.

David Grobe, SIUC director of facilities, said the mistake embarrassed the University.

"We overlooked the detail about the land," Grobe said. "It would have been part of the sale of the land," he said, "but instead we are retaining ownership so the association can use it without any hassle."

SIUC administrators and the association officially closed the sale of the center July 1 for $1.25 million. The SIUC Board of Trustees approved the sale of the center in February.

The association has preliminary architectural plans ready for the new Student Union, where Baptist and international students can gather for activities.

An approval by their board of directors meeting on Sept. 13 is expected. Property construction will begin spring 1994, Swinford said.

Carbondale City planner Bob Mahart said the City Council has approved the re-zoning.

The property has already been re-zoned to the R-3 high-density residential which allows church or church-related activities," Mahart said. "It shows the City of Carbondale has a positive interest in the University and the association," he said.

Mahart said the re-zoned property will not affect the rest of the area because north of Mill Street properties are zoned R-3 also.

Maurice Swinford, IBSA executive director, said the association was concerned with accessibility.

"The parties involved with the negotiations did not know about property error at the time, but the city did," Swinford said. "It was an overlooked mistake and the University immediately took action to solve our concerns about it."

"The new Baptist Student Union will be more than 7,000 square feet," he said. "We have had the best relations with the University and we want to keep that."

SIUC is using the old center for office space and residential housing for single students 21 and older.

Rural children exposed to variety of cultures

By Sean L. N. Hao
International Writer

SIUC's International Programs and Services offers rural Southern Illinois children the opportunity to learn about foreign cultures.

The International Network for Global Educational Activities in Rural Schools, or IN GEAR, was started in 1986 to widen the perspective of children in the smaller rural areas of Southern Illinois.

Beth Mochnick, field representative for International Programs and Services, said sometimes the isolation of rural communities results in an incomplete picture of foreign people.

"The children often have misconceptions about people from other countries," she said. "The children's exposure to other cultures is limited."

Leona Foster, a teacher at Carbondale Community High School, said these misunderstandings include marriage traditions and other customs.

"The children don't know the concept of racism," said Ivan Nikolov, an SIUC student from Bulgaria. "They have always been open, friendly and interested."

Nikolov, a doctorate student in education administration and higher education, has volunteered to give presentations with IN GEAR for the last year.

"This is the type of thing a university should be doing," he said. "IN GEAR provides exposure to cultures they may never have otherwise."

"It gives them a more rounded education while promoting togetherness," Nikolov said.

CCHS has been an active participant in the program and students from China, Japan, Africa and India have given classroom presentations, Foster said.

"It makes learning more interesting when we can integrate the presentations into a topic we're covering in class," she said.

Foster said her students research the international student's country and write a research paper to help them formulate good questions.

International students participating in the program are encouraged to bring visual aids to compliment a 15-minute presentation, Mochnick said.

"Sometimes the presentations will demonstrate the preparation of a native dish or music or dances unique to their culture," she said.

Mochnick said the program allows international students access to areas beyond Carbondale.

"Many international students don't get the chance to mingle with people outside the University community," she said. "It is a shame because they can provide a wealth of information."

The host school provides or pays for the volunteer's transportation to area schools and provides them with a certificate.

Mochnick said the success of the program has resulted in Bridges to Other Cultures, a week-long camp during the summer in which international students have a festival featuring fashions, foods, drama, dance and videos.

International students wanting to know more about IN GEAR or other IPS activities may call Beth Mochnick at 453-5774.

Proposal to change bar entry age wimpy

DOCTORS AND LAWYERS FOR A DRUG-FREE Youth conducted a study in 1991 that directed attention to underage drinking. In Carbondale, the group found that underage youths are able to purchase alcohol 97 percent of the time they are allowed into the bar on underage identification.

Basically, the study established that underage drinking is a recurring problem in Carbondale; establishing a solution to that problem is not as easy. But the Liquor Advisory Board voted in favor of proposing that the bar entry age in Carbondale be raised to 19, in an effort to deter underage drinking.

By acknowledging that 18 is not the right age to drink, however, they should acknowledge that any age under 21 is not the right age to drink. There is no middle ground. But before such a crucial decision is made, other options should be explored that would keep minors and businesses pleased while reducing the incidents of underage drinking.

THE BOARD IS TRYING TO RAISE THE BAR entry age to 19 in hopes that it can be raised one year, every year, until it finally reaches age 21. Allowing only 21 year olds into a bar definitely is a way to keep minors from drinking there.

Realistically, however, another issue must be addressed: Bars will lose a considerable amount of business, and minors will lose a sizeable source of entertainment.

Local bars generated $3.7 million in business last year, and a healthy portion of that business comes from patrons younger than 21. And one of the most obvious reasons minors go to bars in the first place is because a small town like Carbondale lacks other outlets. Therefore, other options for suffocating the underage drinking problem should be explored.

ONE OPTION TO BE CONSIDERED IS FOR BARS to provide neon bracelets for underage patrons in return for their ID. Anyone with a bracelet would not be served, and they could be spotted easily if they were found drinking. They would receive their ID back if they were not caught drinking and their bracelet still is in tact when they leave. Another option is moving the drinking age to 21, but setting aside certain nights of the week to be alcohol free, in which patrons of any age could participate.

These are just two workable methods practiced in other areas to help control underage drinking, while not completely shutting out minors or putting bars out of business. The reason alcohol-free clubs in Carbondale cannot stay in business is because they are competing with clubs that allow minors to enter and drink.

THE LIQUOR ADVISORY BOARD FINALLY IS facing up to its responsibility by addressing the condition of underage drinking in Carbondale, but it is only meeting that responsibility halfway by changing the bar age to 19. If the bar entry age is changed in hopes of reaching 21 in two years, it should just be changed to 21 right from the start.

But if this route is taken, city officials will need to develop entertainment alternatives for people younger than 21, and realize that they will experience a sharp decrease in revenue.

The reason the bar entry age is even a concern is because liquor laws simply are ignored. It is going to take a community effort to see any sort of change in the underage drinking problem: Law officials must enforce the law, bar owners must take responsibility in doing the same, and businesses and residents must help find alternatives for minors. Laying the responsibility on the drinker just does not work.

Changing the bar age is an easy "solution" to a complex problem—perhaps it would be wiser to think realistically.

Restrictions on campus dorms seem juvenile

Are dorm rules too strict? I think so! We pay money to live here, and again (just like jaywalking) we're treated like children. Some of these rules are: 7 p.m. quiet hours, 7 p.m. security (even on weekends), 5 a.m. fire drills, overnight guests are limited to three and much more.

During quiet hours, (7 p.m. to 7 a.m.) there should be no sounds that can be heard outside your door. I can hear my roommate sneeze outside my door! "Violators" get one warning for the year then get written up after each "violation".

If one student is bothering another, they should work it out. If that doesn't work, then the R.A. should get involved.

7 p.m. security is absurd! I can agree with 10 p.m. like last year, but 7 p.m. is a hassle. When I get a visitor after 7 p.m., first they must call. Second, I have to go down and get them.

Students are always hassled coming into their own building after 7 p.m. Sure we don't want people roaming the building late at night, but 7 p.m. is hardly late!

I don't think I need to say much about 5 a.m. fire drills.

Overnight guests are limited to a 3 night stay. Why? Maybe the University's answer to that is "Why ask why?"

What next? Are they going to screen our calls after 10 p.m.?

Maybe no stereotypes will be allowed at all. For those of you who will find out next year, I weep for you! By the way, take caution: I think our calls are screened.

— Brett A. Szabo, freshman, construction technology

Ignoring campus rules endangers pedestrians

I would like to comment on all the bickering going on about the new fines on campus concerning jaywalking.

In my opinion, I have observed that there seems to be an attitude among pedestrians that they are not to yield to cars approaching them at 25 M.P.H.

It seems as if the pedestrians feel that they are larger and will do more damage to a vehicle in motion than it will do to them.

I regularly drive on campus and am regularly stopped by invincible pedestrians.

These pedestrians are not anywhere near a yield sign, but they feel they have the right of way. I may be wrong, but a prime example is in front of the recreation building.

The last time I drove down Grand Avenue I could have sworn all I saw was a sign cautioning motorists of pedestrians, nowhere is there a sign informing motorists to yield to pedestrians.

Yet people ride their bikes and walk out in the street without looking, and the cars there are traveling faster than the ones on campus.

Could it be that the administrators of this school are aware of this attitude?

Maybe they are just trying to tell the students to be more aware while walking across the streets around campus.

The point is that even the administrators know that if they hired more officers to patrol the crosswalks, they won't fine everybody who jaywalks.

However, by hitting the struggling students pockets they know that people will be more inclined to look both ways to look for an officer on patrol, as well as to make sure the path they are to cross is safe.

— James D. Speakman, senior, economics

Top ten list reveals real reasons for regulations

Top Ten Reasons SIU May Have Created The Jaywalking Fine:

10.) Give people another reason to stand in line at parking services.

9.) They only oversold Red and Blue parking stickers by 300% (instead of the usual 400%).

8.) Motorist are tired of having to drive actual speed limits to avoid students.

7.) Allow cops on bikes to practice new lasso techniques.

6.) They figure none of us learned to look both ways before crossing the street.

5.) If all goes well- we'll soon be ticketing squirrels.

4.) To pay for Bitchin' Falmie Decals to be put on all Cushmans.

3.) CASH! CASH! CASH!

2.) Funds for annual Kegger with Jim Edgar cut from budget.

1.) Because, stupid Bureaucratic rules never go out of style!

the Daly machine in Chicago," Netsch said.

Netsch said this victory was a testimonial to her toughness.

"It was difficult for my colleagues to play the 'look-down-their-nose, aren't they cute little girls' game," Netsch said.

But other candidates have not had such success.

"When I first started 14 years ago, I actually had party leaders tell me I had no right to run because I was a woman," Topinka said. "Now I have people tell me things like I'm so good, I'm the next best thing to a man. One man told me I was so good he could forgive me for being a woman."

The best way to deal with chauvinistic comments is to answer with humor, Topinka said.

"I think you can handle a lot of this with humor rather than being strident. Sometimes when these comments are made, it's an attempt to be complimentary," Topinka explained.

Collins and Topinka both emphasized the importance of treating men and women equally.

"I see men as people to be respected and treated as equals," Collins said. "I do not feel in any way dependent or intimidated by the males. I respect them according to their abilities and how they treat me and the people they serve."

Topinka said it is important for women to vote responsibly.

"I think the more we try to segregate the two [sexes], the more problems we create between us," Topinka said. "I don't think women should vote for a woman just because she's a woman. I think we're beyond that."

Despite Topinka's admonition to vote on merit rather than sex, Shirley Thackston, a local National Organization for Women organizer, said she believes many women will vote out of loyalty to their gender simply because they are fed up with unresponsive male candidates.

"They face the 'good old boy' syndrome that's been in politics for so long. They can overcome that. I think women are more committed than men in some issues. We control the majority of the vote, if we can get them out to vote," Thackston said.

Thackston said NOW probably will work in some of the women's campaigns this spring.

The women also have strong backing from some of their male counterparts in the area.

Attorney General Roland Burris, one of Netsch's opponents in the Democratic governor's race, said he is glad to see more women seeking public office.

"I think it will energize the election. Why can't women run? I think it's healthy. I think it's wholesome, and it's so good to see that energy being generated in the party," Burris said.

Congressman Glenn Poshard, D-Carrollville, expressed confidence in the women's qualifications.

"These women are outstanding people that have been in state government for years. These people have paid their dues. They are very qualified," Poshard said.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said women's increased visibility in politics will force women's issues out into the open, regardless of the female candidates' success or failure.

"All these issues are coming into their own, and the good old boy days are over. Men trying to monopolize the political scene — that's pretty well gone," Dunn said.

Netsch offered advice to other women interested in policy making. "It's a very demanding life, but it's marvelous," she said. "If you're interested in government and you really want to make an impact, then go out and do it."

State Police to persuade more drivers and passengers to use their safety belts.

Tastuvic said the safety belt blitz is an educational and informational campaign to make motorists aware that Illinois has safety belt laws which are being enforced.

"There has been an increase in seatbelt compliance," Tastuvic said. "We feel the campaign has added to awareness and seatbelt compliance."

Gainer said seat belt blitzes conducted in 1992 were effective.

"The most recent Illinois

Department of Transportation survey showed that more than two-thirds of Illinois drivers use their seat-belts," Gainer said. "We saw a record low number of fatalities around Memorial Day."

The Illinois State Police started the summer driving season with a 10-day blitz which ran through Memorial Day.

Officers issued more than 4,600 citations and warnings for safety belt and child restraint violations from May 22 to May 31.

Gainer said he is convinced that more drivers and passengers were buckled up and that played a part in achieving low fatality numbers.

Gainer said he wants to end the summer on a positive note.

"We hope our efforts at emphasizing enforcement of safety belt laws during this week-long blitz will convince even more Illinois motorists to get the seat belt habit," Gainer said.

said the Arkansas incinerator handles different types of waste and more hazardous materials than the proposed incinerator at Crab Orchard.

Deamer said it is difficult to compare one incinerator to another because of different designs and the different materials burned.

Many hazardous waste incinerators in the United States meet and exceed performance standards, she said.

Vanessa Musgrave, superfund project manager for U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at Crab Orchard, said a risk assessment was conducted to study the impact of incineration on humans and wildlife in the area and the results met acceptable risk levels established by the USEPA.

Trial burns will be conducted on soil samples from the four sites contaminated with PCBs to determine the conditions necessary to dispose of the waste, Musgrave said. The trial burns are a way to gather the specific engineering information needed to design the incinerator.

Visiting Artists Program provides new perspectives to community

By Charlotte Rivers
Entertainment Writer

SIUC students can view art in a different way this fall at the SIUC Museum.

The Visiting Artists Program is designed to bring a new perspective on art to students and the community, program director Jerry Monteith said.

"It is a bit of a new experience for me," said Monteith, who is in his first year as program director. "The purpose of the program is to bring in a new perspective on art. This is a very vital part of what we do at the University."

Monteith said the closest museum besides SIUC's building is in St. Louis.

The Visiting Artists Program gives students an opportunity to experience art nearby, he said.

"This is a chance for students and the community to meet with up-and-coming artists one-on-one," Monteith said.

"The lecture series at SIUC is the central element of the Visiting Artists Program but artists will take part in outreach programs in the community."

Mel Watkin, curator for the "New Canon" series, is an artist and former curator of the fine arts in conjunction with the Washington Project for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

Watkin said the program features artists involved in their cultural communities.

"The artists will be speaking in the museum, working with students and interacting within the community," she said.

The first of a series of two slide lectures will lead off the program on Thursday with a presentation by performance artist James Luna.

Luna, who lives on the La Jolla Indian Reservation in Valley Center, Calif., is a conceptual artist whose work focuses on the Native American, Watkin said.

Luna will open the series at 7 p.m. Thursday in the University Museum Auditorium.

Monteith, curator for the second series, said the second segment of the program, features artists who work with wood.

"The artists have varied methods," he said. "This is an under-represented area of fine arts."

The second lecture series begins at 7 p.m. Sept. 20 with artist James Surls, who specializes in sculptural works.

The program is sponsored by the SIUC School of Art and Design and receives funding from SIUC and the Illinois Arts Council.

Fight for survival after plane crash shown in 'Alive'

Video Review

By Bill Kugelberg
Entertainment Editor

One thing is for sure: "Alive," which has just been released on home video, is one movie that will never be shown on an airline flight.

This is another film that will put the fear of flying into anyone who watches it, but that should not prevent the video from being slid into VCRs across Carbondale.

The movie, based on a true story, chronicles the desperate fight-for-life by a Uruguayan rugby team aboard an airplane that crashed in the snowy Andes Mountains.

The movie, based on Piers Paul Read's novel, spent more than 29 weeks on the New York Times Best Seller List and has sold more than 5 million copies.

Director Frank Marshall brought in actual survivors of the tragic event for technical advice so he could express exactly what happened during the 10-week struggle.

Nando Parrado, who was aboard the plane when it crashed in 1973, served as the film's technical adviser.

He served as personal adviser to Marshall in making "Alive," and he said he was happy with the film.

"Director Frank Marshall is being very truthful to our story," Parrado said. "The quality of work is very impressive."

The movie gives breathtaking views of the mountains and shows what the survivors had to go through just to stay alive.

Despite the realism depicted in the movie, some events were downplayed for less-than-obvious reasons. The calmness that surrounds the people during the actual crash is not very believable. After the wreck, one character heads out the back of the plane, sits on his suitcase and smokes a cigarette.

The mental stability of the plane's passengers, after falling 10,000 feet in a matter of seconds, probably is the hardest thing to believe in the movie.

Not one person complains of having to change his pants after the plane, which has been ripped in half, comes to an abrupt stop.

Writing Center aids students in skills, organization, ideas

By Kellie Huttes
General Assignment Writer

Students who need help improving their writing skills can get one-on-one attention at the Writing Center in Faner Hall.

The center helps students improve their writing and grammar skills, organize and focus ideas, and learn to develop essays, Jane Cogie, director of the Writing Center said.

Students work one-on-one with a tutor once a week for 50 minutes, Cogie said.

Cogie stresses the importance of signing up for tutorial appointments early, because the center fills up quickly and students could have to be put on a waiting list.

In the spring semester, 283 students visited the center more than 1,200 times, Cogie said.

"We help students gain writing strategies so that they can do the work themselves," Cogie said.

Cogie said there are 11 graduate assistants and seven undergraduate students working in the Writing Center this semester.

Eric Becker, a graduate student worker, said he enjoys working at the center.

"It's a lot of fun," Becker said. "It's not like class where you work with 20 students. I can work one-on-one with the student."

Becker said the center concentrates on the student instead of the student's work.

"We try to produce better writers instead of better products," he said.

Cogie said the center makes no grade improvement guarantees, but those who come back usually make better grades.

Students who came back 6.5 times made A's and students who came back 3.5 times made B's, she said.

The center is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday.

Students may sign up in Faner Hall or call 453-6863 for more information.

Former professor dies at 77

Obituary

By Kellie Huttes
General Assignment Writer

Nelson

Harold E. Nelson, former journalism instructor and adviser of the Saluki Advertising Agency, died Sept. 1 at the Presbyterian Llanfair Retirement Home in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Nelson, 77, taught copywriting, advertising media and creating advertising campaigns at SIUC from 1977 until his retirement in 1982.

W. Manion Rice, a retired associate professor of journalism, helped Nelson with his advertising media and campaign courses for a few years. Rice said Nelson worked well with his students.

"He brought professional experience and expertise to the classroom," Rice said.

"Philosophically, he had a great interest in skills rather than concentrating on theory."

L. Erwin Atwood, professor of theory and methodology, said Nelson helped redesign the advertising program and was a good colleague.

Before coming to SIUC Nelson worked with various advertising agencies in the Midwest and promoted many different products.

He came to Carbondale to live and work on the farm he owned in Johnson County, Rice said.

He came to SIUC soon after moving, because the University was in need of an advertising professor.

Nelson graduated from Kansas State University in 1939 with a bachelor's degree in industrial journalism.

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, at the Llanfair Retirement Home in Cincinnati.

He is survived by his wife, Valerie Murray Nelson; a son, Gordon "Gene" Nelson of Lebanon, N.J.; four daughters, Pat Weed of Arlington, Texas, July Baker of Glenville, N.Y., Margaret Nelson of Chicago, and Vicki Saunders of Hampshire, England; eight grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

AWARD, from page 3

"Cheonae is one of our most involved faculty members," Paulson said.

"She has always worked very hard at the very challenging profession of being an artist."

"This is the confirmation and reinforcement from our peer group that a person needs to continue," he said.

Kim's entry was judged by a panel of seven: five artists, one curator and one layperson. Faubion said.

RUGBY, from page 16

Barclay said that it's easy to figure out why this year's club is more in sync than in the past.

"We're doing better this year because we communicate more, and talk more on the field," he said.

Eastern was able to come back and win the B game by defeating SIUC 5-0.

Steve Roscoe, a warrior for the SIUC B squad, said that Eastern had the advantage due to the experience of the players they had on the field.

"We had a lot of rookies in there and they only scored once," Roscoe said.

"The guys they had in there have been playing for four or five years.

"If we keep working hard though, we'll come around and win some games."

This Saturday, the SIUC ruggers head to St. Louis for a tournament. It will involve mostly club teams which means that their opponents will be extremely experienced.

Barclay said he has a positive attitude about the tournament and thinks good things will come out of it.

"We went there last year and it was a total club side tournament," he said.

"Club games give us a chance to learn a lot and play in more than one game.

Carroll agrees with Barclay and said he's excited for the tournament and that the team is ready to play.

"We're as ready as we can be," Carroll said.

"Club teams play a different kind of ball, but since we're younger and most of the time in better shape, we can usually outlast them."

Maybe a couple more trips up the hill behind the Arena will be in order this week so that the Salukis can surely outlast them.
